Rosh Chodesh -
The gift of the New Moon

He made the moon to mark the seasons

Psalm 104:19

The Concept of the New Moon

It takes about 29.5 days for the Moon to orbit the Earth. During each lunar orbit, the Moon’s appearance changes from not visibly illuminated (a new moon) through partially illuminated (a waxing crescent) to fully illuminated (a full moon), then back through partially illuminated (a waning crescent) to not illuminated again (a new moon). This cycle of moon phases is called a lunation:

- waxing
- Rosh Chodesh
- waning

The first time that the waxing crescent of the Moon is visible (from Jerusalem) marks the beginning of a Jewish month, called Rosh Chodesh (“head of the month”). Twelve chodashim make a shanah or year (however, since 12 x 29.5 equals 354 days, but a solar year is 365 days, an extra month (called Adar Sheni) is added to the Hebrew calendar every two or three years in order to keep the solar seasons aligned with the lunar calendar).

Astronomy note: The Earth’s moon is about 400 times smaller than the Sun but it is also about 400 times closer, so that they both appear to be about the same size in the sky. This accords with the Scripture that says, “And God made two great lights; the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night” (Gen. 1:16).

Rosh Chodesh and the Jewish Calendar

Since a Hebrew month may be either 29 or 30 days long, Rosh Chodesh may occur at two times:

1. If the current month has 29 days, Rosh Chodesh is observed on the first day of the new month.
2. If the current month has 30 days, Rosh Chodesh is observed on the last day of the month as well as on the first day of the new month.
The Shabbat service before the new moon is called Shabbat Mevarchim, or the “Sabbath that blesses the month.” After the Torah reading service, the leader holds the Torah scroll, recites a blessing for a good month, and then announces the day of the upcoming week when the new month will begin. Note that Shabbat Mevarekhim is not observed during the month of Elul (to announce the beginning of Tishri), since the entire month of Elul is a period of selichot and preparation for Rosh Hashanah and the High Holidays.

On the actual day that Rosh Chodesh occurs (in the coming week), the daily prayer service includes a musaf (additional) portion including part of Hallel (readings from the Psalms), an addition to the Shemoneh Esrei (about of the extra sacrifice brought to the temple for Rosh Chodesh) and an additional Torah reading (Numbers 28:11-15).

The History of Rosh Chodesh

According to Rabbinic tradition, the very first commandment given to the children of Israel after being delivered from Egypt was to sanctify the new moon (Exodus 12:1-2), thereby causing the fledgling nation to depart from the solar tradition of the Egyptians (Ra worship) and to look to the moon for a new means of reckoning time and seasons:

הַחֲדָשׁ הַיּוָה לְכִבָּם לְאֵשׁ תְרָשִׁים לְאָשֶׁר הוּא לְכִבָּם לְתָחֹרִים הָשָׁה

This month shall mark for you the beginning of the months; it shall be the first of the months of the year for you (Exodus 12:2)

The emergence of the moon - from darkness to light - is a picture of God’s salvation for the Jewish people and our personal deliverance from darkness to light. Note that the word for month is chodesh, etymologically related to chadash, meaning new.

In Talmudic times, the day marking the New Moon was fixed by actual observation by at least two witnesses. As soon as the new moon was visible as a waxing crescent, the Sanhedrin (the Supreme Rabbinical Court) in Israel was informed and Rosh Chodesh was formally announced (this system was later discarded in favor of the fixed calendar developed by Hillel II (c. 360 CE.), which has been in use to the present day). The day after the new moon was sighted was a festival, heralded with the sounding of the shofar and commemorated with convocations and sacrifices.

Knowing precisely when Rosh Chodesh began was critical to the order of the mo’edim, or appointed times commanded by the LORD. In fact, the entire Jewish calendar was dependent upon knowing when Rosh Chodesh began, and without this information the set times for the festivals and holidays would be lost. Therefore, during times of persecution (e.g., by the Syrian-Greeks), the Jews were often forbidden to observe Rosh Chodesh as well as Shabbat, in order to keep them from obeying God.
Note: The correlation between the moon's monthly cycle and a woman's monthly cycle helped establish Rosh Chodesh as a women's holiday. In the Talmud (Megillah 22b), we read that women are exempt from work on Rosh Chodesh.

Birkat HaChodesh (Sanctification of the Month)

The Birkat HaChodesh is typically said during Shabbat Mevarchim (i.e., the last Sabbath of the month before Rosh Chodesh) to petition the LORD for a good month. It is recited at the synagogue at the end of the Shabbat Torah reading service:

May it be Thy will, LORD, our God and God of our fathers, that You begin for us this month for good and for blessing. May You give to us long life, a life of peace, a life of goodness, a life of blessing, a life of sustenance, a life of physical health, a life in which there is fear of heaven and fear of sin, a life in which there is no shame or humiliation; a life of wealth and honor, a life in which we love Torah and fear God; a life in which the LORD fulfills the requests of our hearts for good. Amen. Selah.

The Molad (time announcement)

After the invocation for the month’s blessing from the LORD, it is customary for the time at which the new moon will appear in Jerusalem to be announced. First the congregation recites mi she’asah nissim, “the One who performed miracles”:

The One who performed miracles for our forefathers and redeemed them from slavery to freedom, may He redeem us soon and gather in our exiles from the four corners of the earth; then all Israel shall be friends. Let us say: Amen.

The chazzan (cantor) then announces the precise time of Rosh Chodesh in Jerusalem:

Rosh Chodesh (Hebrew month) will be on the day (Hebrew day of the week) that comes to us and to all Israel for good.
Kiddush Levanah (Sanctification of the Moon)

The moon is sometimes called levanah in Hebrew (from lavan, white). Kiddush Levanah (sanctification of the moon) is a ceremony that takes place outdoors on a clear night soon after Rosh Chodesh (often on the first Shabbat night that follows Rosh Chodesh). The blessing is normally written in oversize letters in the prayerbook (called otiot shel kiddush levanah) since it is intended to be read outdoors by moonlight.

A Rosh Chodesh Blessing

Often Psalms are recited or sung, and then, while looking at the new moon, the following blessing may be recited:

יִהְיָ֣ה רֶצֶׁ֔ז מִלְפּוֹנָ֖ה יְהוָ֑ה אֶלֹהֵנוּ
וָאָלֹהֵי אַבּוֹתֵינוּ שֵׁתְּרוֹתָֽיו
וֹרְשַׁנָּה מְלֹאָמָֽיהָ
יְהוָ֑ה אֱלֹהֵֽינוֹ שֵׁ֣֝ם דְּמָ֗ע הַמִּשְׁלָֽחַ

ye·hi ra·tzon mil·fa·ney·kha Adonai E·lo·he·nu ve·lo·hey a·vo·t·ey·nu she·te·cha·desh a·ley·nu cho·desh tov, ba’A·do·ney·nu Ye·shu·ah ha·ma·shi·ach, A·men

“May it be Your will, LORD our God and God of our fathers, that you renew for us a good month in our Lord Yeshua the Messiah. Amen.”

Chodesh Tov!
Note: Rosh Chodesh and Torah Readings

In Jewish tradition, the last Sabbath of the month before the appearance of the new moon (i.e., Rosh Chodesh) is called Shabbat Mevarkhim (שַׁבַּת מֶברָכִים, “Sabbath of Blessing”), and an additional prayer is recited asking God to bless the coming month (see above).

If the Sabbath occurs precisely one day before the new moon, however, it is called Shabbat Machar Chodesh (שַׁבַּת מַחֲרַת חַוָּשַׁש, "Shabbat of tomorrow's moon") and a different Haftarah (1 Sam. 20:18-42) is read. Note that if a Sabbath actually falls on the new moon, it is called Shabbat Rosh Chodesh (שַׁבַּת רֶשֶׁת חַוָּשַׁש) and an additional Torah portion (Num. 28:9-15) and haftarah (Isa. 66:1-24) are recited during services.

One final note: The time of the “new moon” is set in the Jewish calendar from the perspective of Jerusalem. For example, if the calendar says that the new moon begins Thursday June 2 (after sundown), you must remember that this is Jerusalem time. In the United States, for example, this means an 8-10 hour time difference.

If in doubt, always check a kosher Jewish calendar!
